Important notes about your dental expense estimate

Note S15 We've reviewed your estimate and can confirm that this expense is eligible for payment under your plan. But please be aware that this isn't a guarantee that we'll pay the estimated amount.

If you receive multiple estimates for dental work, we consider each estimate separately. Your plan's annual maximum for all dental expenses still applies. Some maximums may also be shared with other expenses. We'll pay you the maximum amount that you're eligible for at the time of the final treatment.

You can see your most up-to-date coverage any time on mysunlife.ca, or the my Sun Life mobile app.

NEXT STEPS: After the final treatment, you or your dentist can submit a standard dental claim form.

Keep in mind:

For orthodontic services, we pay expenses only when you've had the treatment.

We pay claims for services only if they're covered by the benefit plan at the time of treatment.

Other things that can affect your payment include: provincial dental association fee guides, laboratory fees, patient history, benefit plan maximums, plan limitations, deductibles, coordination of benefits, overpayment and age restrictions.

Note C60 Your benefits plan has an annual maximum. Payment for this expense would be limited to the amount still available under that annual maximum.

Other coverage

If you are covered under more than one plan, you can claim under both plans. This is called coordinating your benefits. All insurance companies follow these same rules. It's best to make copies of your receipts before you submit a claim. Send the original receipts to the first plan (as explained below) and a copy to the second plan, and keep a copy for your files.

For your expenses: Send your claims to your own benefit plan first. When you receive your claim payment and statement, send a copy of the statement along with copies of your expense receipts to your spouse's plan to claim any unpaid amount.

For your spouse's expenses: Send your spouse's claims to their benefit plan first, then send a copy of their claim statement and expense receipts to your own benefit plan to claim any unpaid amount.

For your children's expenses: The insurance industry uses the 'birthday rule' for children's claims. The parent whose birthday falls earliest in the year sends the child(ren)'s claims to their plan first. For example, if you were born in October and your spouse was born in March, your spouse should send the child(ren)'s claims to their plan first. If both parents have the same birthday, claims should be sent first to the plan of the parent whose first name begins with the earlier letter in the alphabet.

If you are a member of more than one benefit plan, submit your claims in the following order (depending on which of these applies):

1. The plan where you are an active full-time employee. (If you are a full-time employee at two jobs, submit your claims first to the plan with the earlier effective date.), then,
2. The plan where you are an active part-time employee, then
3. The plan where you are a retiree (If you are a retiree under two plans, your claims would be paid at 50% and you would need to claim the unpaid balance from the other plan.)

Protect yourself

While the vast majority of claims submitted under benefit plans are valid and accurate, even a small percentage of inaccurate or improper claims can be very costly and that can affect you as a plan member. If you suspect any improper claiming activity under your benefit plan, we encourage you to call Sun Life Financial's toll-free confidential line at 1 800 361-6212.
